

ABSTRACT

A mobile station in a wireless communication system associates a plurality of context tags with corresponding reference information. The reference information may define a characteristic, such as the location of the mobile station or a time frame. The context tags assigns an easily defined term to the reference information. The mobile station may then run programs that refer to the context tags, and not specifically to the reference information.

10 10080764.doc

09765813-011901